Nino's—An East Side Landmark

There are many reasons why customers keep coming back to Nino's Super Market, located on East Warren Avenue in the heart of Detroit's east side. The main reason why Nino's has become a popular landmark is because of the personal attention and warm friendly atmosphere which the customers enjoy. There are other reasons too, like a wide selection of brand name merchandise, quality meats, cleanliness, and attractive store layout which makes shopping easy and breezy.

Founder of the business is Nino Ugval, a mild-mannered and very personable fellow who has come to really know the grocery business. He literally grew up in the business helping his father operate a store on Pierce and Dubois, years ago.

Ugval has been operating his own store under the name Nino's Super Market for 32 years. His first location was on East Warren and Townsend. The volume grew to a point where he needed more space, so he relocated to the store's present site at 15901 E. Warren in 1950. Today, the store volume hovers around the $1 million mark.

Since then Nino has remodeled the store six times. "The customers like to know that you are interested in keeping a store attractive," Ugval says, "and besides we go out of our way to maintain a pleasing atmosphere."

"One key to our success," he continued, "is that we offer the personal touch. We make all our customers feel welcome and at home, and every shopper is personally thanked by the cashiers at the checkouts. This way they know we appreciate their business."

Another key to Nino's success is the attitude and alertness of employees. Ugval couldn't stop showering praise upon them. Store manager is Joseph Amato, who has been with Nino's 25 years, beginning as a stockboy while still in school. Co-manager is Nino's son, Carlo Ugval, who at 22, is responsible for the frozen food and dairy operation. Another co-manager is Ernie Rallo, 23, who is in charge of the grocery and drug departments. Ed Kiszowski, who has been with Nino for 15 years, is the meat manager.

Nino Ugval, 52, is of Italian extraction, and feels there is a lot of room for growth for independents, contrary to what many may think. "All independents should custom treat and welcome every customer. This is the one big advantage they have over the chains," Ugval said. "Many independents are disgruntled and feel that price competition is the main factor. Not so, it is personal attention which is the most important element for success," he continued.

Ugval, who is treasurer and a director of the Associated Food Dealers, is strongly of the opinion that many grocers and beverage store operators are missing the boat by not belonging to the AFD.

"Today there is a tremendous awareness of problems requiring attention. There is a re-birth and strong enthusiasm encompassing retailers today because there is some one or some organization to turn to."

"I feel that the majority of this enthusiasm stems from the work being done by the AFD and our executive director, Ed Deeb," he added. "I think the retailers will eventually come to realize they cannot sit back and watch any more. They must participate."

Nino and his wife, May, are the proud parents of three children: Carlo; and two daughters, Mrs. Nina Shipley, 24, a Warren schoolteacher, and Enza, 18.
Faygo Route Sales-Team Of The Month

After catching on like wildfire in party stores, Faygo Beverage Co.'s six-variety line of mixers in 10-ounce no-return bottles, featuring "Save The Bubbles" resealable caps, is now moving into more and more Metropolitan Detroit supermarkets.

Studded with six-packs of the recently introduced mixers, this display in the Kroger store at 5931 Michigan Ave. was a deciding factor in winning "Route Sales-Team-Of-The-Month" honors for Elvin Lampkin (left), assistant route salesman, and Charles Van Robays, who heads the Faygo route bounded by Fort St., Edsel Ford Expressway, Grand Blvd. and Wyoming Ave.

The easy-open (just a twist), resealable caps on the handy one-way mixer bottles are the same type long used to protect bottled drugs against contamination and spoilage. Faygo believes all mixer packaging eventually will have provision for resealing because of the vital importance of "bubbles" to enhance the flavor of alcoholic drinks.

Producing mixers requires exacting quality control standards. So, Faygo took 18 months to build up a laboratory staff capable of handling the technical problems and has also expanded a $100,000 water purification system to assure its everyday water supply being free of debris which, no matter how minute, can destroy carbonation.

A recent Faygo survey found that Metropolitan Detroit consumers spend about $14 million annually for mixers to make alcohol beverages more palatable and to control their potency in the form of "highballs." Faygo's mixer line includes: sparkling club soda, extra dry ginger ale, lemon lime (Uptown), bitter lemon (Gini), grapefruit (Tango) and India Express tonic water.

The Stores Need Cleaning Up Too

The month of May has been designated as “Clean-Up, Paint-Up, Fix-Up Month” in the City of Detroit. It is time to get outdoors and work on the lawns, gardens and homes. But it is not only the home front which requires cleaning. Everything should be given at least the once over, including the inside and outside of many grocery and beverage stores.

In proclaiming the month, Mayor Cavanagh said, “The Department of Public Works operates year round in servicing residential and commercial properties. We help residents as much as possible, but we must rely on the individual to brighten up his own house and make it a source of pride to himself and his neighbors.”

The Mayor’s Committee, “Keep Detroit Beautiful,” (KDB) is presently finalizing plans for programs to bring the beautification and anti-litter message to the public’s attention. Tying in with the campaign, many distributors, bottlers, and manufacturers will carry anti-litter posters. This Litter Prevention Committee is to be commended for its splendid efforts since the initial meeting with Councilman Rogell last year. The fruits of their efforts will now start to be recognized.

The Associated Food Dealers board of directors urges all grocery and beverage store operators to do their part in cleaning up their stores, and in turn, inspiring the community to do its share individually. Let’s Keep Michigan and America Beautiful!

Beware of Till-Tapping: Newest Con Game

Till-Tapping is the name of the game. It is the latest crime fad or scheme affecting food and beverage store operators.

Here’s how it works. A team of usually three or more persons (one female, the rest male) enter a store. The female partner locates a shopping cart and begins to shop in the store. The accomplices remain at the front end of the store nearest the cash registers—the one checkout which is vacant and unmanned.

Once they are in position, the woman begins to OBVIOUSLY shoplift, drawing the attention of the store manager and other employees. When she is through shopping, she then goes to the checkout furthest from the unmanned register, and begins to remove the items she seemingly or “purportedly” had stolen or shoplifted.

Then, while the attention is focused on her in making sure she removes all the items the manager “thought” she had stolen, her accomplices open the unmanned cash register from the front, side or back—whichever way they can—and remove only the larger bills from cash drawers.

Next, they close the register drawers and leave—always making sure the cash drawer is closed. Then, the suspected woman pays for her groceries and leaves the store to later rejoin her accomplices.

Discovery of the “tapped till” or register is made only when the cashier of the vacant checkout returns to her post, usually long after the “till artists” are gone.

The Associated Food Dealers urges every manager of every store to be extremely cautious of con men and women who play the costly game of “Till-Tapping.”
Service Food Stations?

The most imitated successful selling formula has been the concept of mass merchandising and self-service invented by grocers and supermarket operators. Numerous non-food industries have copied the formula and have achieved great financial success and recognition in their own right.

As Urban Renewal programs continue to spell doom for smaller independent grocers, many of whom have been forced out of business or relocated to suburbs, perhaps retailers in the core city area should “borrow” the formula of gas station operators. The idea: to convert vacant gas stations into high volume independent grocery stores.

How you ask? Well, if you ask most inner-city grocers what they are lacking most, they will tell you parking space. And since funds for expansion and acquiring of adjacent buildings are often hard to find, one answer is to move to a nearby vacant gas station, and there are many in the Motor City.

Many of the independent stores operating smack dab in the center of urban areas are housed in buildings and neighborhoods which were built long before the automobile became popular. Suburban shopping centers with plenty of parking space were not even conceived at the time.

Usually, the gas station building (excluding the parking and service area) is comparable to the size of many older or smaller grocery stores and the newer convenience stores. With a little renovating, a vacant gas station could solve the parking problem, and increase a store’s volume.

It must be understood however, that with or without parking, if a retailer doesn’t provide services, create the warm friendly atmosphere and stock the products customers demand, he won’t be around very long—regardless of location.

Service—that’s the name of the game.

Association With An Action Program

By MIKE GIANCOTTI

Since the Associated Food Dealers is constantly working on action programs which receive community-wide attention, more and more people are talking about the AFD. They want to know more about the grocer, his problems, his accomplishments, his industry, as well as his association.

As stated in the AFD constitution and reprinted on our membership certificate, the aims and objectives of this association are as follows:

"To improve the industry in which we do business, constantly offering the consuming public the best possible products and services at the lowest possible prices in the American tradition of free enterprise." The AFD also represents its members in the cause of justice and fair play at all levels of government, business and the community at-large. That, in a nutshell, basically describes our association goals.

But the Associated Food Dealers does much more than that. Our program and plan of action can be separated into four basic categories. They are:

1—EDUCATION, providing workshops and seminars to inform retailers of new techniques and ideas which will benefit them;

2—COMMUNICATIONS, between all segments of the food and beverage fields, from the retailer to the wholesaler to the manufacturer (or broker) to the consumer;

3—PUBLIC RELATIONS, to inform the community and government officials of our problems or achievements, and to continually elevate the stature and importance of our industry and those who do business in it;

4—LEGISLATION, to lobby for or against Legislative or Congressional bills affecting our industry.

Surely you can see that our scope and activities are far-reaching and most complex. We live in a fast-changing world which requires immediate attention to problems.

This year, the Associated Food Dealers celebrates its 51st year as an active food trade association, and whose membership has grown to where we today represent 1,900 retailers. And, as AFD executive director Ed Deeb pointed out recently, "we're still growing strong!"

Every type of retailer from the corner grocer to independently owned multi-store operators are members of the AFD who enjoy direct benefits of the association, whether it be our group Blue Cross-Blue Shield plan, other group life and disability insurance plans, or the services as outlined above.

Whether a retailer who calls on the AFD is a member or not, we have never failed to assist him in any way we could. That's our reason for being to help and serve.

All I can say is that any retail food or beverage store operator who isn't yet a member of the AFD is missing the boat!

Sam Hoffman of Frito-Lay, Inc., an AFD member, is back on the job again following major surgery.

John McClosky, former AFD retail member and operator of Johnny’s Mac’s Poultry & Game, has founded his own cookie company. He has been in the food business 20 years, and now is a distributor of Maurice Lenell’s line of cookies. He said he would join as a supplier member soon.

Bill and Fred Restum, AFD retail members and operators of Restum Market, have remodeled their store.

Member William Wonsik, operator of Bill’s Market on the east side, is retiring soon after 25 years in the business. Happy traveling, Bill!

Mr. and Mrs. George Schleicher are grandparents again. Their son Richard’s wife, Carol, gave birth to a baby boy, David, recently.

Speaking of grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Al Wyffels are grandparents again. Their son Norbert’s wife, Lynn, recently gave birth to Gail Ann.

Have you heard that Sass Lilly, an AFD director and operator of Helm & Lilly in Ferndale, is now heading up a baby sitting business? ’Tis true, ’tis true! That in addition to spending time in his gas station across the street from his store.

Jack Harland has been named Detroit district manager for Peter Eckrich & Sons, an AFD member, it was announced recently. He had previously held the same position in Saginaw. Thomas Shong succeeds Harland in Saginaw.

Hassett Food Marts has been named regional franchiser by Convenient Food Mart for the nine counties of southeastern Michigan. The firm is headed by Robert B. Hassett, with headquarters at 18240 West McNichols, Detroit.

Word has it that the amicable Miss Kay Adams of Chatham Super Markets, an AFD member, missed her first day of work due to illness since she has been with the company. She is the secretary to Chatham president Bernard Weisberg. And you know, said Kay, “I feel guilty about it.” Oh, to have more like Kay Adams around.

The AFD extends our thanks and appreciation to Chester Kowalski and the gang at Specialty Foods for hosting the delicious buffet dinner during the March directors meeting of the association. The firm is producer and distributor of a wide line of delicatessen products.

Nostalgia: “Through these doors pass the most wonderful people in the world—our customers.” Sign which appeared in every one of the old C. F. Smith Stores, Detroit.
To the AFD:
Upon retiring from the grocery business, I wish to express my thanks for all the services and good work being done by the association and Ed Deeb for the independent grocers.

Thank you so much for your very kind letter of congratulations on behalf of the Associated Food Dealers. It was very thoughtful of you to do this especially since my uncle, Peter DeMarco, is an independent grocer.

All of my efforts have been towards making Detroit a better place to live in and I know that this has also been the aim of your Association.

KOEPPLINGER'S
4-packs
NATURALLY

Many, many of your customers buy food for only two or three people. They are the young marrieds whose families are still to come and the late middle-aged and elderly whose families are grown and gone. They buy a lot of hamburger and a lot of frankfurters. And they buy a lot of buns when buns are available in small packages.

That’s why it pays to keep Koepplinger’s 4-Packs of hamburger and hot dog buns in easy sight and reach. Do it for the same reason your meat department displays 12-ounce packs of hamburger, two pork chops, many other two-portion and three-portion packages.

If you are not selling Koepplinger’s hamburger and hot dog buns in 4-packs, tell the Koepplinger man to leave a few of each tomorrow. You’ll be amazed at how fast they move out.

The One Month Corporation Liquidation Provision

By MOE R. MILLER
Accountant and Tax Attorney

Tax on a stockholder's gain on liquidation can be postponed by using the code’s one month liquidation provision.

A corporation with a considerable amount of unrealized appreciation (that is, property having a greater market value than the adjusted cost), which would otherwise result in a liquidating gain to the shareholder, can have the tax on that gain deferred by liquidating in one calendar month.

This special provision is not restricted and can be used by any domestic operation, with the exception of a “collapsible corporation” in certain situations.

What are some of the reasons for a stockholder seeking liquidation:

1—Possibility of being classified as a personal holding corporation and being faced with additional Corporate Tax.

2—Faced with the burden of paying taxes twice: once as a corporation, and again as an individual.

3—Possibility of accumulating more than $100,000 in surplus, which could mean a burden of an additional Corporate Tax on the excess accumulation.

Let us take a typical example:

Property with an adjusted cost of $50,000.00
Appreciated Market value of $200,000.00
Surplus Earnings of $24,000.00

How One Month Liquidating Works

Dissolve the corporation, but avoid paying tax on the appreciated value of the building, which is $150,000 greater than the original cost. This can be accomplished under Section 333 of the Internal Revenue Code, commonly referred to as “One Month Liquidation.”

Under Section 333, when you dissolve the corporation, you do not pay tax on the appreciated value of your building. But, if it is eventually sold by you, as an individual, you will pay tax on the difference between the sale price and the original cost, less the depreciation.

In order to accomplish the above, if the corporation is dissolved, you would then consider the surplus as ordinary income. In other words, the above surplus of $24,000 would be taxed as ordinary income, rather than a capital gain on 50%, or $12,000.

Recommendation

It is my firm opinion that this procedure, even with the depreciation recapture rule, be followed when your surplus is low. It is much easier, financially, to dissolve a corporation with a surplus of $24,000 and appreciated building value, than to dissolve the same corporation with a $100,000 surplus and appreciated building value.

In the next issue of the Food Dealer we will discuss Corporation’s 12 Month Liquidation.

Our Industry Owes So Much To So Few

By ALEX BELL

We might as well be as popular as a green and white polka dot tie at a Republican convention. Deeb has been hollering for me to complete this epistle so we can make the deadline.

We include this item for Jay Welch: The 19th hole is celebrated with an alcoholic drink by 78% of golfers, a Universal Marketing Research study finds. Its survey of 1,529 golfing magazine subscribers showed a lesser proportion—71%—drink before dinner at home.

We are about to throw ourselves on the nearest spear, as Salim Sarafa has threatened to sue us if he doesn’t get that trip to Siberia. To date, the SSS Fund doesn’t have enough to send him to Saline, Mich. So Sal, please don’t use us for over 10c

We like that song “Westchester Yeshiva” to the tune of Winchester Cathedral.

Everybody wants to be young again. Hell, we just want to keep getting older.

Detroit sources claim that major auto makers all have paid spies in their rivals’ factories; presumably they tip-toe through the tool-ups. (Edeebnote: One more like that and you are all finished.)

We picked this up somewhere and we think it is very apropos: Never have so many in our industry owed so much to so few. We have in mind here the dedicated few who devote so much of their time, effort and money to fighting the industry’s battles . . . your battles. There are the men who have joined and actively support their trade associations. I shudder to think of how much worse things might be for all of us if it weren’t for them.” So, c’mon gang, everything depends on you!

We have some real doozies for customers, but this one takes the pot: Last week some noodnik comes in to cash in some bottles. Among them were 18 throw-aways, pardon me, no-return bottles. The gal we have been supporting for 30 years told him they were throw-aways and he told her: “I thought we paid 5¢ for them and we brought them back and you threw them out.” A college graduate no doubt.

Note to W. Shamie: Come on Walter, quit acting so coy. We still maintain that our man in Chattanooga told us that you had your eye on a council seat. And, we would not call our man in Chattanooga a liar.

Aceybee’s Viewpoint: Walter, lay off the AFD. The needle only goes so far, then the excrement will hit the air mover. Besides, we feel crime affects all businessmen and the total society, IN ADDITION to grocers. Is that so hard to understand?

Compulsive Cussers have been treated successfully with an experimental drug, haloperidol, says Medical World News. Psychiatric patients afflicted with Tourette’s disease, heretofore resistant to treatment, have an uncontrollable urge to curse. In one experiment, symptoms of all 12 patients treated with the new drug were relieved. (We have a large supply of haloperidol on hand, if anyone needs some.)

A New Jersey laboratory claims it has developed a chemical compound that, among other things, makes teeth pearly, removes dandruff, freshens the breath, prevents chemical damage to electric batteries and inhibits corrosion in radio and TV circuits. This is not a birth control chemical, but it does everything but.

Hey Sam and Harvey, where were you at the last AFD board meeting?

Dear John, that’s all she wrote. —ACB.
National Bank Begins Checkmate — A New Guaranteed Check Plan

The National Bank of Detroit has inaugurated Checkmate—a "guaranteed check" with an extended line of credit, which revolves around the NBD check guarantee card and assures payment of all checks drawn on the account to retailers up to the amount of $100 per check.

Checkmate accounts and cards are issued only to credit-worthy customers of the National Bank of Detroit. Purpose of the new guaranteed check plan is to help shoppers negotiate personal checks, while protecting the businessman from possible loss from checks.

Abner Wolf Names Liston Assistant General Manager

Ben Wettenstein, executive vice-president and general manager of the Abner A. Wolf Company, an AFD member, last week announced the appointment of Robert K. Liston as assistant general manager of the firm. Wettenstein said Liston "brings a great deal of experience in the food field industry to the company."

In addition, Wettenstein announced the addition of Isadore "Izzy" Malin to the Wolf staff. Malin is a buyer of frozen food products.

According to NBD officials, a merchant need not have an account with the bank in order to participate and enjoy Checkmate's privileges. The service is free to all business firms who accept Checkmate checks. All a merchant must do in order to be protected is to make sure the signature and account number of the check and check user matches the guarantee card he carries, and that the check must be signed in the retailer's presence.

One official of NBD said his firm hopes that the new plan will help reduce the number of bad or fraudulent checks floating around Michigan, now totalling about $3 million per month.

It was just over a year ago that the Associated Food Dealers of Greater Detroit (AFD) met with officials of the Detroit Clearing House Association, the official check-cleareding organization for area bankers, urging that their members:

1. screen more carefully potential checking account customers;
2. issue identification cards with protograph of users; and
3. open longer hours to accommodate shoppers.

NBD is to be commended for inaugurating such a plan as Checkmate, which helps put prestige back into checking accounts.
