Delightful DAGMR Doings

In a follow up letter to Michigan Gov. William Milliken, the Associated Food Dealers, the state's largest food distribution association with over 2,000 members, said the problem of forged and fraudulent welfare aid checks must be curbed.

The AFD told Gov. Milliken that the problem of passing and cashing of the forged or fraudulent State checks, now totaling over $125,000 annually in Michigan, can be curbed by utilizing better identification with welfare recipients.

The main problem, said AFD executive director Edward Deeb, was primarily the second checks issued to recipients who allegedly claimed their original checks were lost or stolen. "The state issues the second check within 48 hours, not allowing enough time for the original check to clear the banks," he said. "We feel this is highly unfair to merchants, who cash 70 percent of all checks, and who have no way of knowing whether the first check was even issued or not. The merchant, trying to perform a service by cashing the check, ends up losing money."

In the letter to Gov. Milliken, the association said "the best policy to guard against forged or fraudulent check cashing of ADC or welfare aid checks is 'proper identification', which means issuance of an identification card quite similar to the one the State issues to all public employees, or even one similar to that of the current driver's license."

The association urged that a meeting be set up with the governor and proper state officials to help curb this serious problem as soon as possible.

Summertime Is Picnic Time

Once again the popular and highly successful promotion "Summertime Is Picnic Time" appears in The Food Dealer on Page 11 of this issue. Summertime is an excellent opportunity for retailers to display these and various picnic supplies and related items. Properly merchandised and promoted, these picnic and outdoor barbeque displays will mean more sales and profits.

The Sounding Board

To the AFD:

I had a chance to review the plans for the consortium to train meatcutters, cashiers and warehousemen, as reported in The Food Dealer for May.

This is a very ambitious program, and I am delighted to know that Detroit has been selected as the test area by the National Alliance of Businessmen. I know that your organization will meet the challenge and that all of us will be better off for it.

Lynn A. Townsend Chairman of the Board Chrysler Corporation

I would like to thank you and your member companies who participated with the Detroit Institute of Technology Senior Class Picnic for Inner City Children. Your cooperation and assistance was greatly appreciated.

The Associated Food Dealers' price surveys of special departments were on the ball and are invaluable. Keep them coming for all the various departments.

As most of the association members know, the State of Michigan accumulated some $34 million in surplus monies as a result of the $1 license insurance fee charged to motorists by the state. I think these funds could be better used for our Senior Citizens, widows and people on welfare.

There have been public comments by the mass media to drop the charge. If anything, I feel the state should up it another dollar and apply it to a worthy and needed social cause as mentioned above. Perhaps the Associated Food Dealers should pave the way for such action, since the problems of the needy and aged have often been neglected.

Joseph Huebner Market Manager and AFD Member East Detroit

I was very delighted to read the article "Hate Mongers?" in the March issue of The Food Dealer. I have personally tangled with Father Cunningham on a couple of occasions with the Mayors' Committee for Consumer Affairs, of which I am a member.

Father Cunningham will take one little remote instance and build a focus point around it, and this is entirely wrong. I am sorry I did not know the AFD was meeting with him or I would have been in the audience to spur you on. It is a shame that someone with his following does not tell all the truth, but rather incites people.

WMU Food Distribution Students Enjoy 'Challenge'

More than anything else, it is the "challenge of the food business" that has lured students to Western Michigan University for its famous food distribution course, the Associated Food Dealers has learned.

Recently, AFD executive director Ed Deeb, who is also editor of The Food Dealer, interviewed five WMU students who explained why they were a part of the food business. They were:

Richard Lorenzetti, of Melrose Park, Ill., sponsored by Dominick's Super Markets; Fred Ried, Deerfield, Ill. of Jewel Tea Company; John Warden, Allen Park, Mich., of Chatham Super Markets; Charles Perconti, Chicago, of Dominick's and Richard Haase, Davenport, Iowa, of Jewel. They were attending the recent Spartan Stores convention in Grand Rapids. With them were their advisor, William Haynes of WMU, and their "little sister" of Sigma Phi Omega, Miss Kay Wildner.

One of the main problems involved in training the distributive education students, they agreed, was not at the office or headquarter level, but rather at the store level, getting the managers to accept the students and their training.

A major reason most of them got interested in the food industry as a career opportunity, was that someone in the field had inspired them into it. A basic quality for keeping things interesting was to enjoy working with people, they said. Most of the food companies worked closely with the students, and encouraged them, they continued.

The students felt also that industry should take the initiative to be willing to do more training, which in itself would attract more persons to the food field. They expressed satisfaction with the WMU food curriculum, but felt not enough companies were aware of the program.

The students, all members of food fraternity, announced an industry appreciation day will be held next March. Previous seminars and dialogue with industry have been most gratifying, he said.

An Open Memo

Dear Mrs. Consumer:

With the big movement toward consumer protection today, we are confident that you have heard the numerous gripes of fellow consumers, concerning various industries and products and services, including those of the food industry.

Some of your favorite frustrations include: leaky milk cartons, dented cans, packages which don't reseal, spoiled products, improper cooking instructions and so on. We appreciate knowing the things that disturb you and promise to continually try and correct them.

You should be aware however, that there are things which disturb us too. We would like to mention some to you with the hope of bringing greater understanding of the problems and situations that affect us.

Recently, the Associated Food Dealers conducted a question and answer session with 38 representatives of retail stores. Some of the problems affecting merchants include: inefficient help or no help at all, crabby customers, lack of shelf space, lack of display space, coupon handling nuisance, too many government forms to fill out, to many different taxes and licenses, lack of insurance coverage, too many opening hours, out-of-stock conditions, bad check losses, problems of robbery, holdups and pilferage crimes, insufficient number of wholesale outlets or distributors, union aggravation, equipment or refrigeration which has broken down and so on. These are only some of the problems, the retailers told the AFD.

In reading some of the problems affecting the food trade generally and food merchants specifically, we hope you and all the consumers can see that some of the problems that disturb you, also disturb us.

We do not ask that you should buy inferior products, for whatever the reason. We only ask that you try and understand that in this highly complex and fast-paced society of today, we of the grocery industry are doing a very efficient job of providing you with the best possible products and services at the lowest possible costs.

If you have a legitimate complaint, tell the Store Manager where you shop, or call the Association at (313) 542-9550. Just give us two percent of your confidence and we'll try and gain the other 98!

National Food Council To Emphasize Nutrition

WASHINGTON — Upon the recommendation of the Food Retailer's Panel of the White House Conference on Food. Nutrition and Health, the Food Council of America has been reactivated. The FCA will act as an umbrella organization of food trade association (including the Associated Food Dealers) designed to mobilize the food industry into a nationwide voluntary Nutritional Awareness Campaign during the months of September and October.

The panel also recommended that the regular promotion, advertising, and other communications facilities of food firms and the industry be marshalled to launch a campaign to encourage and create interest in better eating and health habits. Elected chairman of the Council is Clarence Adamy, head of the National Association of Food Chains. Anyone desiring further information, contact the AFD office, (313) 542-9550.

and Sen. Robert Richardson Jr. (R-Saginaw). In introducing the resolution, the Senators stated that "broken beer bottles and sharp edges of beer cans noticeably mar our shorelands, beaches and public areas and pose a health threat."

It should be noted also that House Bill 2096 has been introduced in the Legislature and would require retailers to charge a 6¢ refundable deposit on all glass containers. It was introduced at the height of Earth Day activities recently. The Associated Food Dealers is opposed to the measure in its present form, and is seeking to amend the measure, along with the Michigan Food Trades Council, to permit 50% of the deposit to be retained by merchants for handling costs. If the provision is not acceptable, then the association would oppose the bill.

Operating Costs Will Dictate Retail Trends

By HARVEY L. WEISBERG

It has been estimated by reliable food studies done by Super Market Institute, National Association of Food Chains and even our Associated Food Dealers, that food prices will have increased at least five to six percent before 1970 is over. The greatest pressure for continuing increases in retail prices will come almost entirely from rising costs, such as labor, transportation, material, taxes, etc.

The most noticeable increase in prices affected red meats, poultry and fish, but there were some items in which prices have decreased, such as in the case of produce generally, and apples, oranges, grapefruit and cucumbers, in particular.

At the same time prices have been rising, consumer spending has been sluggish of late, with retail sales down about one percent compared to a year ago. Food chain sales were up around seven percent, but when adjusted for price increases, were about the same as last year. Further, the availability of some $2 billion of additional money, as a result of the reduction in Federal Income Taxes will be available next month, and should offset other possible declines in money circulating in the economy.

Rapidly rising marketing costs have been a major food factor in food price increases for several years. However, the inability of food chains in a highly competitive market to pass along costs as fast as they occur, has greatly contributed to a four-year industry decline in earnings per dollar of sales. During this time, profit rates decreased from 1.4 cents per dollar of sales in 1964 to 1.02 cents in 1968—a 28% reduction, according to Cornell University.

Labor, of course, is a major factor in food costs and wage rates continue to rise. Recently, the Retail Clerks Union settled a new contract which calls for a 41% increase in wages over the years from April 1970 and other increases in labor contracts are anticipated as a result of negotiations taking place with the meatcutters and Teamsters unions. Rail rate increases recently have also been approved. So far in 1970, wage settlements in food retailing have approached the 15% mark in cash, plus fringe benefits.

Since labor accounts for about 50 percent of the cost of marketing food and processing and marketing costs account for about 60 percent of the sales dollar, higher wages in the neighborhood of 10 percent, if reflected at retail, would be quivalent to a 3% price increase.

It is precisely for these reasons among others, that food merchants in the Tri-County area of Wayne, Oakland and Macomb have recently experimented with shorter store opening hours, as the AFD had publicly announced. The main reason for the move was an attempt to reduce operating expenditures, while attempting to maintain or reduce food costs to consumers.

Other industries which enjoy higher average profits, usually can consider price increases over the long run. Not so, however, in the food industry. But due to the high competitive factor and low profit factor, perhaps it is time that food retailers began looking at cost increases over the long run, because of the vulnerability of each individual operator.

One thing is certain: either merchants must find additional methods for reducing operating costs, thereby maintaining current price stability while fighting inflation, or the higher costs must be fully passed on to consumers.

If we seek to "professionalize" ourselves and our industry, to attract more capable people, the time has come to look for reducing costs. There is no reason why food retailers cannot eventually enjoy the same amount of sales in less hours.

It's good for the industry. It's good for the consumer. Hopefully this can come to pass on a voluntary basis without the need for legislation or contracts.

The Nude Actor Caught Clothestrophobia

By ALEX BELL

Jim Bishop bow your head. Doc Greene cut your heart out. Old Acey's back in town!

Looks like unit (or dual) pricing and protecting the consumer is going to screw up the food business real good.

We in the food business should form a Grocers League for protection against the consumer. Why is it that the food business is always the whipping boy?

Our child bride (or first wife, whichever one you like) accompanied us to New York recently. So what happens? She decided to go shopping one day about 11 a.m. Being a pretty smart cookie (?), we just stayed in the lobby engaging in our favorite pastime of girl watching. So our child bride gets back to the hotel about 4 p.m. We asked her what purchases she made, and she replied:

DETROIT RENDERING COMPANY

SINCE 1850

SUPERIOR SERVICE - TOP MARKET VALUES

1923 Frederick * Detroit

571-2500

"First We Render Service"

AFD MEMBER

"Nothing, I just went shopping." You can't figure them out!

We culled this from a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal, and thought it was apropos:

"Labor unions did not create the inflation, which now helps to build pressure from members for bigger settlements. Union officials are also trapped in their own past rhetoric, for they have long preached that business profiteers at labor's expense. If unions aren't either persuaded or pushed into a little moderation, though, there's going to be a lot of unnecessary unemployment. Labor, like business, can price its products out of the market."

Well, well we now have a big "simmis" going in the food business. Some boys have knocked off six hours per week. As we write this we wonder who is going to be the first prostitute to break these hours? We do have a mental bet with ourself, as to who it will be. So if we tell you we won the bet we will lay it on the line. We have been in this business for 51 years, of which 38 have been in Detroit, and we have heard all the excuses for long store hours, such as every body is working three shifts, people do not have ice boxes to keep food fresh, etc.

So let's quit kidding boys. What's the old American custom? Chase the buck. We do know for a fact that one major chain in this market did knock 200 hours off the work schedule as soon as the recent "RCA" contract was signed. How's that for getting the pound of flesh? So come on boys, get with it. We reiterate, you can train the American consumer. The banks close at 3 p.m.; think that one over. Just think if store hours were 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., six days a week you would be able to get first class help and you would not have to take on some of the stumble bums you have to put up with today. But after all, six hours are still a good start for shorter store hours. Keep it up boys, and don't worry if some of your customers "kveth" a little. They will get used to the hours in about three weeks, and no more "kvetching."

Heard about the fellow who worked all of his life and accumulated some dollars so that his kids could go around without shoes.

Dammit, we always thought that "polorization" meant improving conditions in the Artic regions.

With so much nudity in films and on the stage, we think a lot of performers must be suffering from clothestrophobia. (No Eddie, that is also a play on words.)

Heard about the loser who was about to walk the last mile and after his last "anything goes" meal he asked the warden for a doggie bag.

Watch for information on our package deal for the NAIFR convention at the Fountainelbeau in Miami. The dates are Aug. 23-27, and convention chairman Dave Deerson promises the time of your life.

As we write this, House Bill 3181 is still bottled up in committee in Lansing. (In case you've forgotten, HB 3181 is the bill to create a 22% markup on beer.) So dear reader, if you want this bill, get busy on your legislator and give him a hot foot. In so doing, remind him that he will be up for election some of these days. After thought: Why not goose Gov. Milliken a little bit too.

Our good executive director recently sent us a joke about a steak. Here goes: The diner in a restaurant asked the waitress to take the steak back to the kitchen and have the chef cut it for him. Said he: "If the chef can cut it, I can chew it."

A deep dark secret: We were offered a part in the movie

"The Love Machine." Yes they wanted us to play the part of the vibrator. Hmmmm.

We understand from our man Bangkok that the old devil merger of the AFD and MFDA is raising its head again. If some people would quit trying to divide and conquer, maybe we could get somewhere. Why should brokers and other so called do-gooders try to get into the act?

If we could inject our two cents into this controversy, we would suggest that Messrs. Weisberg, Deeb and Mansour, Taylor should get together and talk it over and either fish or cut bait. And in the event that no progress can be made, let's get out the brass knuckles and may the best association win.

To sum it all up, the most devastating consequence is that the rich diversity of experiences and viewpoints that could be our greatest resource has become instead the source of dissension and the setting for conflict.

Dear John, that's all she wrote. - ACB

Notice to all Food Merchants: Fresh Fish Safe to Eat and Sell

Michigan's food merchants need not be concerned over the recent fish scare in the Great Lakes area. Consumers can continue to enjoy freshwater and saltwater fish and shellfish with every assurance that the fish being sold in stores has passed scrupulous inspection by government officials in Canada and the U.S.

Smart merchants are stocking a wide variety of fish products for extra sales and profits. We remember too well the damage which was done to cran-berries and cyclamate due to harmful and damaging publicity. Both U.S. and Canadian government officials have given the consumers the go-ahead to eat fresh fish. Be sure you have enough on hand!

Marine City Superette Opens, With Long Family Tradition

The youngest grocery store in Marine City, Poole's Superette, is an offspring of one of the oldest such stores in the state, if not THE oldest. It opened not too long ago on South Water St., in the building formerly occupied by Beattie's IGA.

The store is owned by Jasper J. Poole, whose father, R. L. Poole, is the grandson of Charles L. Poole, who opened the first Poole family store in nearby Algonac in Jasper Poole decided to open the family's second grocery store when James Beattie moved to take over the IGA Foodliner at South Main St. and Broadway, he says, because he likes its location with parking in the back.

Helping to operate the superette are Lillie Yearwood and Gary Trese, Jasper's nephew. The Poole family also operates a furniture store in Algonac.

Minimum Wage To $1.45 Beginning This July

The House-approved increase in Michigan's minimum wage laws passed the State Senate by a 25-11 vote recently, after amendments covering migrant and agricultural workers failed to be made a part of the measure. House Bill 3397, as it was known, will increase the State's minimum wage to $1.45 per hour this July 1 and $1.60 per hour beginning July 1, 1971.

Gov. William Milliken, in a statement issued following the Senate action, said "Senate action in approving the increase in Michigan's minimum wage is a major step in assuring a cost of living increase, the first since 1967, to thousands of residents who most need the additional income."

Charitable Contributions and the Tax Reform Act

By MOE R. MILLER

Accountant and Tax Attorney

Sweeping changes have been made in charitable contribution deduction rules. Individuals, corporations and all other classes of taxpayers are hit. Changes affect gift tax and estate tax as well as income tax deductions.

Hardest hit are contributions of appreciated property, sales to charity at a bargain and most contributions of less than the donor's entire interest in the property; such as, future interests and rent free use.

Some of the new law changes in charitable deduction rules are discussed as follows:

1—The 1969 Tax Reform Act has limited the opportunity for tax saving by making charitable gifts in the form of appreciated property rather than in cash. The tax break only remains available for contributors of appreciated property whose sale would result in long-term capital gain to the donor. Example: A taxpayer buys stock for $4,000 sells it to charity four months later for $4,000 when the stock is up in value to $6,000. The charitable deduction would be $4,000.

- 2—A donor who gives to charity a right to use his property can't take a charitable deduction for the rental or other value of this right.
- 3—The unlimited charitable deduction allowed individuals who meet certain detailed tests is gradually eliminated under the act.
- 4—Before the 1969 Act an individual could deduct up to 30 percent of his adjusted gross income for gifts to most charities with a carry over of any excess; up to 20 percent of adjusted gross income for gifts to private foundations and organizations. The 1969 Act raises the 30 percent ceiling to 50 percent of adjusted gross income.

These Charitable Gift Transactions Are Not Changed:

The new law makes no change in deduction rules for charitable contributions to public charities in the following situations:

- 1—Cash contributions.
- 2—Securities or real estate contributions, even if they have appreciated in value. (As explained above.)
- 3—Used clothing, furniture and other personal items which have not appreciated in value.

- 4—Expenditures in connection with charitable fund raising activities.
- 5—Out-of-pocket expenditures in performing services for charity.
 - 6—Cancellation of debt from charity.

The 1969 Tax Reform Act narrows the deduction opportunities for charitable gifts or remainder interest in trusts or remainder interest on legal life estates or estate for years.

The Act eliminated abuses under the rules, allowing an individual to take a charitable deduction for property transferred in trust to pay the income to a family member or other private person and the remainder to charity.

HAVE ANY TAX QUESTIONS?

If you have any questions concerning taxes or related problems, drop a note to Mr. Miller care of The Food Dealer, 434 W. Eight Mile Rd., Detroit, Michigan 48220.

WHO'S YOUR CHOICE FOR SALESMEN OF THE YEAR?

You now have the opportunity to choose or nominate your 1970 candidate for representatives of the year. This is not a popularity contest. We want you to select those representatives who you think best deserve the titles . . . Broker, Wholesaler, Manufacturs' and Driver-Salesman representatives of the year. The four chosen will be honored at the Associated Food Dealers "Annual Awards Banquet," to be held in September.
