Legislative Update

Cart caddy usage permitted by 16-year-olds

In response to an inquiry by a manufacturer, the Labor Department's wage and hour division concluded that anyone 16 or older is permitted to operate the power-driven cart caddy. The Fair Labor Standard Act (FLSA), sets 16 as the basic minimum age for nonagricultural employment. The wage and hour division has determined that cart caddies are not motor vehicles since they are not used "as a means of transportation," but they do fall into the category of power-driven machinery. Although the FLSA permits the employment of 14 and 15-year-olds outside of school hours in retail establishments, the Act explicitly prohibits the operation of power-driven machinery by anyone under the age of 16.

Governor Engler's State of the State Address explained

Governor John Engler, in his eighth State of the State Address announced his most ambitious legislative agenda yet. Unveiling 15 proposals ranging from major tax cuts to health insurance for children, he called on lawmakers to prepare families, workers and students for the 21st century.

"The state of our state is outstanding-better than at any time since Michigan was converting the Arsenal of Democracy into the automobile capital of the world," said the governor.

During his address, Engler unveiled proposals to:

Chairman's Message

by Bill Viviano AFD Chairman In my first column, I want to begin by saying that I am honored to serve my industry as the recently elected AFD chairman. I am looking forward to working with the AFD board, staff and membership.

This is one of the strongest trade associations of its kind in the country and its members are what keep it healthy, vital and powerful.

I was very proud to receive the gavel from past chairman Mark Karmo at the recent AFD trade dinner, "A Night of Romance." And what a night it was! I can honestly say it was one of the best dinners and certainly the best attended ball in AFD's history, with over 1,000 guests. It was wonderful to see all of you there, enjoying the great food, fabulous music and the camaraderie. A Night of Romance was a great beginning to my term as your chairman and I look forward to serving you throughout the year.

Although we all enjoy events, like the trade dinner and AFD's popular golf outing, AFD is much more than a social club. It is the backbone of your industry in this state. AFD is here to support you with services-such as cellular and pay phone programs, health and liability insurance, coupon redemption, our library and educational seminars-that all help to make doing business easier and more profitable.

AFD represents you politicallyconstantly monitoring legislation that affects the retail food industry and going to bat for you when bills are proposed that could be harmful. Each year the petroleum industry introduces legislation that, if adopted, would make it legal for gas stations to sell beer and wine. AFD has successfully killed these bills for four years and will continue to lobby against them. Without the support of AFD this legislation could put many of our members out of business.

Through this publication AFD keeps you informed with industry news and entertained with photos and profiles of members, cartoons and interesting feature articles.

This association also works to help those who are less fortunate through our annual Turkey Drive, Senior Citizen Picnic and other donations. We also help to educate our young and talented through our scholarship program.

As you can see, AFD does a lot of work for its members. But the board and staff can't do it alone. There are plenty of AFD committees that could use your help. AFD does many, many things for you. It's now time to step up to the plate and take your turn on one of our volunteer committees: the Turkey Drive, Scholarship Committee, Golf Outing, Annual Trade Dinner, Political Action, Membership....the list goes on and on.

Our committee members work hard but the good they do and the satisfaction they feel make them come back again and again. There are many opportunities to use your talents. Call AFD at (248) 557-9600 and volunteer just a little of your time. Together we can make AFD even better and stronger than ever.

On a sad note, the Board of Directors of the Associated Food Dealers of Michigan sends its deepest condolences to the Bellanca family on the loss of Peter Bellanca. A partner in the law firm that guides AFD in legal matters, Bellanca, Beattie & DeLisle, Peter was a very dear friend and close associate to our industry. In 1959 he was diagnosed with cancer and given six months to live. Through the grace of God, he defied the odds and was here to touch our lives for almost 40 years more. For this we are grateful.

The Station Wagon & The Meat Cutter

The first Lipari's Market, a conventional store of the times, with products stacked high behind the counter

By: Danielle MacDonald Jim Lipari, founder of Lipari Foods, survived many lean years in the food and beverage industry because of his station wagon, and because he had a trade as a meat cutter. Jim learned the grocery business from his father, Thomas, who owned Lipari's Market and Maria's Market both in Detroit. In 1944, Thomas Lipari sold his markets because his oldest son Charles was drafted, leaving the family short handed in the stores. Jim was a 16 year-old Eastern High School student at the time.

and the Lipari family opened a self-serve store on Mack Avenue in 1947. The entire family worked in the store, from his father Thomas and mother Maria, to his siblings Vita, Angela, Charles, Rose and Sam. Jim worked as a meat cutter. "In those days, supermarkets were not self-serve," explained Jim. "The grocery clerk would get every customers' products." As you can see from the picture of Lipari's Market, grocery products used to be stacked high behind the counters before the introduction of self-serve. The customer would stand at the counter to place an order. "The customers needed something to hold their products while they shopped. We bought buggy's that looked like baby carriages but they sure worked great." mused Jim.

With a new innovative store, the Lipari's took a chance on some new items. "We started selling frozen vegetables which was completely foreign to our customers," explained Jim. "Only the younger people bought frozen products. The old-timers would not even give the products a try." Their concern was product freshness which was why the older > generation was not completely happy with self-serve grocery stores either. With self-serve came packaging and merchandising. "We used to merchandise fresh picked vegetables in the summer by displaying them outside the store and watering them on a regular basis," said Jim.

In 1950, Jim married his High School sweetheart, Rose, and they had two children, Thom in 1952 and Lori in 1956. The war again impacted the Lipari family. Jim was a foot soldier in Germany from 1950 to 1952 and his brother Sam was drafted in 1952. Jim returned from the war and worked in the store, but the family sold their self-serve market in 1953. Now 25 years-old, Jim hit the streets as a mini-distributor out of his Buick station wagon selling a unique product to grocery stores and restaurants. Plastic was new in-1953 and Jim was distributing plastic cake covers for Palmer Plastics. He also began adding other products to his product line. "One of the biggest selling items was Miracle Cloth which was a reusable cloth like a Handi-Wipe," Jim recalls.

During the Spring of 1955, "I was on my route and just happened to notice a new meat market on Jefferson Avenue so I stopped in to look around," explained Jim. It was Tuesday and Hershey's Meat Market was scheduled to open on Thursday. The owner, Julius Hersh, ran a full page ad touting his new meat market, but he hadn't yet hired a meat cutter. "Julius asked me to help him get through the opening weekend and I was glad to do it. I went to get my paycheck on Saturday night and Julius handed me the keys and the books. He wanted me to be the new manager." Although he never intended to stay at Hershey's, Jim worked at the meat market for five years.

In 1958, Jim hired John Bazzo to work at Hershey's. The two became good friends and in 1960 they left the meat market and opened a full-line grocery store called Lil' Giant on Mack Avenue. Lil' Giant was one of the pilot stores in Detroit for Food Stamps. "Our claim to fame was our B-B-Que chicken," explained Jim. "We made our own barbecue sauce called Bazzo's. Our customers loved the sauce so we started selling it for $.59 a bottle. We didn't even have a label and it sold." Jim went to Lansing to register Bazzo's Barbecue Sauce and then started selling it to grocery stores and restaurants. "We even got a good product review in the Detroit Free Press in 1962." In May 1963, the store was also profiled in AFD's monthly publication which was then called The Food Dealer. On Jim's day off from the store, he would pack up his station wagon with Bazzo's and work a sales route.

Unfortunately, three years after its grand opening, Lil' Giant closed its doors. Jim formed Lipari Food Distributors in 1963 in order Lipari Food Distributors was headquartered on Harper Avenue in St. Clair Shores. The picture at right shows the small manufacturing space that was used to make Bazzo's. Jim's retired father Thomas, shown in the picture, helped make the sauce. "I wanted to specialize in sauces so I soon picked up Martell's Sloppy Joe Sauce which tasted great and was packaged very innovatively.' Not surprisingly, Jim was one of the first distributors to sell products in the new foil dry packaging. He also added Bravo Spaghetti Sauce to his product line.

"I sold products out of my station wagon and did a different route every day," explained Jim. One day on his route, Jim came across a friend that was closing his restaurant. "I met with him and asked if he would manufacture a paghetti sauce called Bella Mia for Lipari Food Distributors. We had to buy extra cooking equipment, but soon we were making Bella Mia along with Bazzo's."

Three years later in 1966, Lipari Food Distributors moved to Nine Mile Road which was four times larger than the space on Harper. Jim continued to add products to his route, growing the distribution side of the business.

"The manufacturing side of the business was not growing as fast as the distributing side so we stopped production of Bazzo's," said Jim. The chef continued to make Bella Mia and Jim sold it for him. In 1966, Jim became the first distributor to represent Don's Chuck Wagon Onion Ring Mix. In May 1967, Jim received print media coverage for selling a 75case island display of Don's Chuck Wagon Onion Ring Mix to Johnny's Market on Grand River in Redford. Needless to say, the product was very popular.

Jim's big break came in 1967 when Frank's Tea & Spice appointed Lipari as their distributor. "Their foil-pack gravy mixes were a very profitable item," explained Jim. "It was at this point that I became known as the spice man on the street." Lipari's niche was the independent supermarkets. "Spice's were very service oriented and customer service was a skill that I had mastered." Jim still worked out of his station wagon. but he needed to purchase additional trucks to keep up with the growing amount of customer deliveries. The first salesman was hired in 1967. Les Wilkinson, who is now deceased, went on to become vice president of Lipari Food Distributors. Although Jim was finally making a profit distributing spices, he still worked at his meat cutting trade on the weekends.

In 1971, Jim's son Thom started working at Lipari Food-Distributors. They still focused primarily on spices at this time but were continuing to expand. Soonthey purchased their third building. all of which were in a row on Nine Mile. The last store that was purchased had two walk-in coolers. A friend in the brokerage business, Chuck Mascari, asked Jim if he could help sell 20 cases of Alps Swiss Cheese. He agreed and put the cheese in one of the two walk-ins. "I went out on my sales route selling cheese," explained Jim. "I sold out almost immediately."

This favor for a friend is how Lipari Food Distributors started in the deli business. In 1972, Jim called Chuck Mascari and asked for more cheese along with some ham and salami. Today, Lipari Food Distributors is known by the slogan "the deli people." This new expanded product line quickly out grew the two walk-in coolers. In 1977, Lipari moved to Production Drive in Mount Clemens with 21,000-square-feet of space, 20 employees and six trucks. They continued to master the deli business over the next six years.

Today, Lipari Food Distributors is known by the slogan, "the deli people."

In 1983, Thom went to his father with a new idea. "My son wanted to sell frozen dough to the bakeries," explained Jim. "I thought the idea was crazy; bakeries needed fresh ingredients, but I told him to give it a try." Lipari was host to the first deli and specialty food show in Michigan, and they decided to showcase their frozen dough. "The first order of frozen dough at the show was for 200 cases," said Thom. Lipari was the first company in Southeastern Michigan to market in-store frozen dough to the independent grocer. This program continued to grow steadily through the 1980s. In fact, two new freezers were built to accommodate the bakery line.

In March 1995, Lipari moved to their present location in Warren with 90,000 square feet. In 1996, Lipari partnered with Spartan Stores to become their deli and bakery supplier. In order to accommodate the Spartan stores, another 35,000-square-feet of space was added. This deal expanded Lipari's distribution network statewide. In the early 1980s, Lipari began distributing in Ohio, increasing their strength in that market. In 1997, Lipari acquired S & S Distributors in Cleveland, Ohio and set up a sales office staffed by 12 employees to service the market.

Today, Lipari Food Distributors has 250 employees, 54 trucks and one Buick station wagon. They carry 6,000 items in the deli, bakery, grocery food service, packaging and supplies categories.

"We have grown dramatically over the last two years," said Thom. "In fact, Lipari Food Distributors has doubled in size." Currently, Thom is president of Lipari and Jim is chairman of the board. Jim's daughter Lori is senior vice president, and her husband Mike is vice president of finance.

According to Thom, "we are looking at packaging and supplies as a growth opportunity for the future. I also feel that the food industry is becoming more regional and Lipari will respond to that trend." Jim is now semiretired but his business philosophy remains as the driving force of the company: take care of the customer. These are not just words at Lipari. "Instead of using computers to handle some store level demands, we hire additional salespeople as we expand the business. Technology is not used to eliminate salespeople; it is used to help our salespeople so we can maintain a high level of customer service," said Thom.

Jim Lipari's biography is scattered with many lucky breaks like buying a building with walkin coolers just months before a friend asked him to sell 20 cases of cheese. But the secret of his success lies in the fact that he mastered the trade of meat cutting, and that he always had a station wagon to service his customers. "It was my meat cutting profession that kept my family eating for many years." And it was the station wagon that helped launch each new business venture. Jim Lipari still drives a Buick station wagon today.

Income tax cuts

The highlight of the Governor's 1998 legislative agenda is cutting the state income tax from 4.4 percent to 3.9 percent. The cuts begin in the year 2000, and when fully phased in, Michigan's income tax will be the lowest since 1971, and will save taxpayers $3 billion.

"These tax cuts are not targeted at special interests. These tax cuts are across-the-board. They ease the 'middle-class squeeze' for everyone-enabling families to buy a house, pay off bills, pay for day care, plan for college or save for retirement," Engler said.

Engler also called for a constitutional amendment to make it harder for the Legislature to raise taxes on the people of the state. This amendment would require a three-fifths vote of both the House and Senate to raise the income tax, sales tax, use tax or the single business tax.

Environmental bond

To make Michigan's environment cleaner, the Governor proposed a $500 million bond. These new "Clean Michigan" bonds will benefit both peninsulas in three critically important ways– $400 million for restoring polluted and abandoned sites' $50 million for protecting drinking water and $50 million for upgrading our 96

All fourth graders reading The Governor also unveiled an ambitious "Reading Plan for Michigan." His "RPM" strategy calls for the end of social promotions and insists that all Michigan children be able to read by the beginning of fourth grade.

"I've often told our families that our strategy for success comes down to one thing: The state with the best schools wins. I set this challenge before the Legislature: Children who start kindergarten this fall must be able to read by the time they reach the fourth grade.

The Governor is directing the Michigan Department of Education to assure that every child is assessed from the first day of school with the best diagnostic tools to determine reading readiness; to see that every child is monitored on an ongoing basis to insure reading progress and finally, to design a model summer reading program to reinforce reading year around.

Engler also praised the many volunteer groups that can be enlisted to help make sure that all children are becoming good readers.

In addition, the Governor renewed his call for safer public schools and "Touch a Teacher" legislation-to protect teachers and school staff and to promote learning.

Welfare and health care for families

To strengthen Michigan families, the Governor is launching an initiative called MIChild to expand insurance coverage to more than 150,000 children. MIChild, combined with the Governor's previous "Healthy Kids" initiative, means that virtually 100 percent of all Michigan children will have access to health insurance.

Engler also unveiled his "Parental Responsibility Initiative" to crack-down on deadbeats. The $15 million "no excuses" strategy will target 30,000 non-custodial parents currently in arrears.

In addition, the Governor launched "Operation Zero Tolerance" to end drug abuse among welfare recipients. Beginning with a pilot program, welfare applicants will be tested before receiving benefits. If they test positive, they will be referred to treatment.

When it comes to electricity deregulation:

Detroit Edison has gone to bat for its customers

Detroit Edison has been at the forefront of protecting the interests of its customers during the prolonged debate about deregulation of the utility industry. Legislation to enact a reasonable deregulation framework has stalled in Lansing. Many say the lack of action is because the average customer just doesn't care about the issue. We don't believe that is true. Of course, our customers care about their utility rates...even more about the reliability of electric service. If you turn on the switch, the light should go on. We believe that, too.. and have for the last 95 years.

Let's take a look at what Detroit Edison has been calling for:

1. The issuance of rate reduction bonds to refinance the "stranded cost" debt of the utilities for a shorter term and at lower interest rates, with the savings being passed on to all electric customers.

Big Industry, the Small Business Association of Michigan, and the Michigan Retail Federation have said "no" to rate reduction bonds, as has Attorney General Frank Kelley.

2. If a power supply firm in another state sells power in Michigan, it only seems fair that Michigan power producers should be able to sell in the other state as well. It's called reciprocity and it will help ensure that Michigan utilities can continue to be competitive, that jobs can be saved and that community taxes can continue to be paid. Additionally, reciprocity reduces the need to build expensive new transmission lines because power imports would offset power exports.

The same parties who opposed "stranded cost" recovery and rate reduction bonds also have opposed reciprocity.

3. It is important to keep our power plants locally owned and operated, to assure job continuation,

Selling off power plants to recover "stranded costs," as has been called for by those who oppose the utilities, would in fact cripple the utilities' ability to serve those who choose to stay with their "home utility" and would eliminate the ability of the utilities to act as the "back up" in case of outside supplier nonperformance.

4. We need action now to put the force of law behind reasonable deregulation efforts, in order to give private investors the confidence to invest their money in new electric generating facilities. It is imperative that new power generating facilities get on the drawing board and under construction in order to avoid a future filled with brown-outs and other interruptions to electrical service.

Since deregulation was proposed, Detroit Edison has pursued policies which would benefit its customers. We believe that all customer groupsresidential, commercial and industrial-are interested in reliability of electric supply, the protection of the environment, and the protection of vulnerable and low-income customers. Detroit Edison will continue to pursue these objectives. After all, we have served our customers loyally and reliably for over 95 years. As we enter the new millennium, the prospects for even greater service to our customers lie just ahead. Deregulation can be beneficial...it can mean lower costs...but above all, it must mean safe and reliable electricity to the homes and businesses of our valued customers.

We will continue to represent your best interests.

We're putting our energy to work for you.

At Detroit Edison, we do more than provide electricity to our 2 million customers. We're proud to serve Southeastern Michigan in many other ways, including:

- Awarding nearly $3.9 million annually in grants to over 500 charitable organizations, through Detroit Edison and the Detroit Edison Foundation.
- Sponsorship of National Night Out, Kids Voting Michigan, Detroit Edison/McDonald's "Play It Safe Around Electricity" program, Michigan Envirothon, Detroit Festival of the Arts, and the Detroit Thanksgiving Day Parade.

• Providing $172,000 annually to emergency food and shelter providers through the Detroit Edison Foundation's Holiday Season Matching Gifts program.

- On behalf of our employees, donating more than $49,000 annually to education-related organizations through the Detroit Edison Foundation's Walter J. McCarthy, Jr. Volunteer Service Awards.
- Caring for Michigan's environment by planting 10 million new trees.
- Serving as Michigan's second largest property tax payer.

Lottery Lowdown

Answers to your customers' Big Game questions

by Commissioner Bill Martin Just a month after the launch of Tuesday draws for The Big Game, there are bound to be questions surrounding the Lottery's multistate game. Your customers have probably asked you many of the following questions, and it's important to have accurate information at your fingertips.

Multi-draw tickets. The question we're hearing the most at Lottery headquarters is, "How can I buy tickets in advance for The Big Game?" There may be some confusion over multi-draw tickets now that The Big Game has gone from one draw to two draws per week. It's good to note that game play and ticket purchase operate much the same way as the Michigan Lotto game, which also has two draws per week.

Multi-draw tickets for The Big Game may be purchased up to 15 draws in advance, or 7 1/2 weeks. It's important to make that distinction to your customers since there are now two drawings per week. Michigan Lotto may be purchased up to 20 draws in advance, or 10 weeks.

Payout Options. Since the start of The Big Game, payment for jackpot winnings has remained the same: equal installments over 20 years. There is no lump sum cash option payment for The Big Game.

However, since July 1997, Michigan Lotto has offered players a choice on payment of jackpot winnings. At the time of ticket purchase, Lotto players must choose between annuity or cash option payment. Annuity winners will be paid equal installments over 25 years. Cash option winners receive the present cash value of their jackpot share in one lump sum payment; no future annual payments are made. Anonymity. Since 1988, Michigan Lottery players who have won more than $10,000 have been given the right to remain anonymous. This applies to all Michigan Lottery games except for The Big Game, because the multistate lottery legislation states that the identity of winners is considered public record.

The name and city of residence for all Big Game winners is available to the public regardless of prize amount.

For more information on The Big Game or other Michigan Lottery games, contact your Lottery representative.

New Instants! March marks the start of some new games and the return of an old favorite to Lottery ticket counters. On March 2, players can try their luck with "Lucky Times Ten," a new $2 game with a top prize of $30,000. Give your customers a break with the new $1 "Coffee Break Cash." Prizes range from $1 all the way to $3,000.

The popular "Cash For Life" returns on March 23. The $3 game boasts overall odds of less than 1 in 4 to win a cash prize, with a top prize of $1,000 a week for 1 ife. Other "Cash For Life" prizes range from $3 to $1,000 instantly.

Legislator Profile

Representative Larry DeVuyst balances environmental and economic issues

by Kathy Blake

Larry DeVuyst is a freshman state representative for the 93rd district, serving most of Gratiot county and all of Montcalm county. DeVuyst, a republican, serves on four standing committees: agriculture; conservation, environment and recreation: forestry and mineral rights and house oversight and ethics committees. He is also an assistant minority whip. "As minority whip, it's our job to poll members of the caucus to find out where they stand on issues and to try and mold the Republican party together, by supporting the issue," said DeVuyst.

DeVuyst has a great deal of background for serving on the agriculture committee, having been a farmer for many years. His hunting interests make him a knowledgeable member of the conservation, environment and recreation committee.

His district has several areas designated as renaissance zones which are designed to entice manufacturers to come and establish manufacturing and processing plants. Renaissance zones provide exemption from local and state taxes for 12 years and diminishing exemption for an additional three years. In Montcalm county, renaissance zones have enabled the construction of several new DeVuyst, 58, graduated from Ithaca High School and attended Michigan State University.

He was a farmer and equipment business owner prior to being elected to the House of Representatives in 1996. In 1991, he was appointed to the Natural Resources Commission (NRC) and he chaired the commission from 1992 until becoming a state representative. "The NRC oversees the Department of Natural Resources: making decisions on fish and game rules and contested case hearings and making changes to wetlands and mitigation guidelines,' says DeVuyst. Michigan became a world-class fisherie for Walleye, a popular sport fish, during his time on the commission

As a member of the conservation committee, DeVuyst started the task force last spring to introduce legislation to allow deer hunters to use elevated stands during firearms deer season. There is a good chance it will pass this year. DeVuyst says this would enable hunters to see their. target better, with more likelihood that stray bullets would go into the ground rather than traveling horizontally

Representative DeVuystialsointroduced a bill to allow woodchuck hunting during spring turkey hunting season. Woodchuck are very destructive to crops. DeVuyst believes, and farmers need help controlling the woodchuck population. The Michigan United Conservation Club supported the bill and it. passed in the House

As a member of the forestry and mineral rights committee. DeVuyst introduced a bill requiring oil and gas companies to make an accounting of the prices. of gas and oil sold and post production costs charged to the leaseholder HB5261 and 5262 now await action in the Senate

The biggest bill that DeVuyst worked on last session was the 300-page drain code "This bill was written on the recommendations of draincommissioners who worked three and one half years looking at old. drain code to come up with revisions We've been holding hearings to determine properwording. Hundreds of people have testified on this bill. Currently it is stalled in the agriculture committee and has undergone several amendments. DeVuyst commented, "Eighty-four amendments will stifle just about any bill. This bill can still make it with a good substitute."

Some people are opposed to drains because the use of drains has diminished wetlands. DeVuyst explains that without drainage ditches, Michigan would still be a swamp. The first governor of Michigan decided to have the first drain code. There are now provisions to protect existing wetlands, yet more and more building results in the need for more and more drains.

The drain code bill recommends forming a watershed authority to oversee the drain code decisions. It only takes a few people to request a hearing for the cleaning of a drain, but 25 percent of the people petitioned must approve it. DeVuyst says this is too many people when the drain is close to urban development. Another recommendation would require county drain commissioners to inspect drains once every three vears

Having been a farmer up untilthree years ago, DeVuyst is greatly concerned with legislation affecting farmers. "I took 6,000 hogs a year to market and grewcash crops sugar beets, dry beans, com and soybeans," he said. His district has many farms. He says, "There is getting to be a good dealof integration in the food business. Farmers are setting up processing plants on the farm and handling wholesale and retail distribution. 1 don't see that as bad, it's just different." The trend towards fewer and larger farms has been ongoing for numerous years. "They look more like corporations, people with the wherewithall can do the most efficient job." DeVuyst believes the future of the food industry depends on the profitability of the farmer

DeVuyst is concerned with this and other issues affecting use of Michigan's natural resources and land and he takes a common sense approach to legislation that maintains everyone's best interests

"Life is luck," says Southfield Liquor store owner

by Ginny Bennett

Hani Yono met his wife Sana when they were attendants in his sister's wedding. "Life is luck," says Hani. They were married in 1986 and Hani Yono says it was "good" luck, too.

His good luck reaches from his personal to his business life, as the owner/manager of the highly successful Southfield Liquor, Inc. on Southfield Road in Allen Park.

Yono's fortune is measure for measure in direct proportion to his hard work and his determination.

In 1979, Hani Yono left his native country of Iraq and went to Toronto, Canada with a 15-day visa and a degree in agriculture from Basrah University in southern Iraq. Eventually he extended his stay. He worked there in the restaurant business learning everything at a restaurant which specialized in Italian and Middle-eastern cuisine. Gaining the respect and trust of an immigration officer, he became the first Iraqi he is aware of to change his status from a visitor's visa to a permanent resident without the support of a sponsor and without hiring a lawyer. Through this contact, his family, cousins and two friends all were allowed to join him there.

In 1984, Hani Yono came to the United States as a new citizen. It wasn't his dream to come here, even after he had visited for three months in 1977. Still, he willingly followed his family here and never has had any regrets.

Once a resident, Hani was searching for work in a restaurant setting when he became aware of an opportunity he was uniquely qualified to do. Applying to the Detroit Board of Education, he was hired to be a special instructor of food management at Golightly Vocational Center, located at Dickerson and Jefferson. Later he went into the video rental business, and in 1987, along with his family, bought Easy Pick Market, a Woodhaven liquor store.

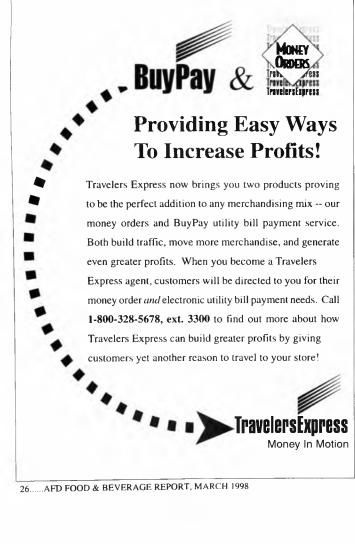

May 12, 1988, Hani Yono bought Southfield Liquor and on the same day his daughter, Angela, was born. In the ensuing years he has tripled the business. "In my eyes," says Hani, "working in the restaurant business will prepare one well for any kind of business. It is the hardest."

Buoyed by the success of his liquor store, Hani may open another storefront in the building that adjoins Southfield Liquor. He is looking forward to this opportunity to grow his business in an area which is experiencing substantial renewal and development.

The new Lions training camp will be located in Allen Park and on Southfield Road just south of I-94 is Ford Motor's Danou Tech Center. Across the street from Southfield Liquor, Oakwood Hospital just opened with a 24hour emergency clinic and a rehabilitation center. Sixty-five new employees will come into the neighborhood. A new Sunoco Oil is next door, RiteAid and Arbor are within sight and Kroger is close by. "Competition is healthy," says Yono. Yet he is not afraid of the competition since he is confident that people will come to his store. Hani and Sana, known as Joe and Sue to their customers, give people reliable, honest and friendly service. They also have good prices, running specials on items for certain time periods. He cautions, however, that he doesn't believe in advertising lower prices on a continuous basis, but instead advertises sales on popular items, like money orders, for only a part of each month

Sana says that Hani is a unique father. He is unusually devoted to his two daughters, Angela, nine and Anita, seven. At the time of this interview. Hans was trying to plan a week-long ski vacation in northern Michigan "Trying to plan to be away from the store for a week is difficult this year," Hani says, "it is hard to find someone to tend the store 11 The difficulty infinding good employees makes him appreciate Sana even more-She works many hours as a parttime "boss" in the store while being a good mother and somehow finding time for baking, keeping house and sewing for herdaughters

The Yonos know that the secret to their success is working hard and being on-site and open long hours so that customers will always want to shop there for the friendly attention of "Joe" and "Sue."

Another way of ensuring good business, Ham insists, is his longtime association with the Associated Food Dealers of Michigan. He has been familiar with the AFD since he came to America and has been a member since he bought the store. Yono encourages all retailers, business owners and wholesalers to get involved with AFD. "They are working hard to achieve our goals," says Yono

"America is truly the land of opportunity," says Hani, feeling proud to have accomplished somuch in such a short time. "And truly, life is luck."

Workplace injury and illness rates at record low

Industry progress in improving worker safety and health is evidenced by the recent Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) data which reveal a record low for on-the-job injuries and illness in 1996. This is the fourth consecutive year in which BLS injury and illness rates have declined, and the lowest rate reported since BLS started collecting data in the early 1970s. In 1996, for wholesale trade in grocery and related products, injury and illness rates fell 9.48% and injury rates were down 8.85% from 1995. However, the 1996 data for grocery stores show a 2% increase in injury and illness rates (from 9.9 in 1995 to 10.1 in 1996 per 100 full-time workers), with a one percent increase in injuries.

National Wine and Spirits Brownstown Grand Opening On January 23, 1997, after Judge Gidding's temporary restraining order against the Michigan Liquor Control Commission was lifted. National Wine & Spirits Corporation of Michigan made its first liquor delivery. Since that day NWS has delivered 2,500,000 cases, picked 20.5 million bottles for split cases, and made 275.000 more deliveries.

The season for Red Hook Nut Brown Ale

Red Hook Nut Brown Ale is the seasonal rotator to Winterhook and Blonde Ale. Nut Brown Ale pays homage to the brewing traditions of Ireland. This tawny colored ale features mellow barley malts and a soft hop signature. The result is a malty brew with a hint of sweetness in the finish. The beer's pleasant aroma is the product of two hop varieties: Northern Brewer and the rare U.S. grown Hersbrucker. The brewers' careful blend of six barley malts and two hop varieties results in a surprisingly smooth dark beer. An ale for all seasons, Redhook's Nut Brown is the transition brew from the chilly nights of winter to the breezy days of spring.

Redhook Nut Brown Ale is priced in line with other Redhook products and is available in 416 NR bottles and 1/4 and 1/2 barrels. The brand is supported by a complete line of promotional materials available February through May.

The full line of hand-crafted ales from the Redhook Brewery are distributed by your local Budweiser wholesaler. You can also contact Redhook representative Dave Morgan at (248) 366-0295.

House subcommittee approves OSHA reform legislation

In February the house subcommittee on workforce protections approved two bills to improve enforcement procedures by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. The OSHA Compliance Assistance Act (H.R. 2864) would expand an existing OSHA program that provides consultation assistance to small business owners. Free onsite consultations would be provided to those who request them and allow businesses to correct violations without penalty. The bill would also authorize increased spending on this program. Rep. Cass Ballenger (R-NC), the bill's sponsor and subcommittee chairman, said the consultation program would allow employers to "work with the state OSHA to find and fix problems without the adversarial, threatening relationship that usually comes with federal OSHA enforcement inspection." H.R. 2877, also approved by the Subcommittee, prohibits OSHA from setting quotas for its inspectors including numbers of inspections, citations issued, or numbers of penalties assessed. Both bills must now be considered by the full House Committee on Education and the Workforce. Still pending before the Committee is the "Safety Advancement for Employees Act." a broader OSHA reform bill sponsored by Rep. Jim Talent (R-MO).

Liquor official to resign post

State liquor control commissioner Phil Arthurhultz will resign April 3 to pursue a fulltime career in radio. Arthurhultz recently had to repay the state $5,000 for improper expenses.

Liquor control commission announces new travel expense policy

Liquor Control Chair Jackie Stewart released the Commission's new travel and expense policy saying, "This new policy is fair, flexible and addresses head-on recent concerns about Liquor Control Commission expenses," said Stewart. "As public servants it is imperative that we be good stewards of the public trust and taxpayer dollars, both in action and appearance. This new policy will help us do just that." The new policy states:

"Commissioners will only be reimbursed for travel and meals while they are on official Commission business, i.e. attending violation hearings, meetings away from their work stations or in the case of Administrative Commissioners, attending Commission business at the Commission office, other than what has been designated as their work station."

Michigan liquor revenues looking good

A recent audit shows Michigan's liquor revenues slightly exceed pre-privatization levels. Treasury reports liquor revenues increased 1.56 percent or $8,558 in fiscal '97 over the previous year. "This news is very good. These numbers clearly indicate from a revenue standpoint, the new distribution system is working with revenues this year of slightly better than pre-privatization levels of more than $200 million," said Liquor Chair Jackie Stewart. Michigan changed from a state run liquor warehousing and distribution system to a system run by Authorized Distribution Agents last year. For more information call the Liquor Control Commission at (517) 322-1353.

Two of the dishes they are considering are Penne with Roasted Vegetables and Oriental Stir Fry and Basmati Rice. Both items are made with all-natural, organic more per pound. Although experts say the product will be safer and taste no different, media reports have continued to raise the issue of safety with consumers who may then be cautious about trying the newly processed red meat.

Although articles in mainstream publications like USA Weekend (Jan. 23, 1998) tend to be fairly and objectively written, the internet has several sites that use the words warning! or alert! in their information summaries. From these websites readers are encouraged to contact their congressman and the USDA registering their opposition to "soulless" corporations selling "nuclear" food. Form letters are available that can be printed from the computer so that naysayers can write to their grocer's parent company office threatening a boycott or "awareness" rally.

In food irradiation, short wave lengths of radiant energy are used to rid food of harmful microorganisms, insects, fungi and other pests, and to retard spoilage.

The process also can inhibit sprout growth on potatoes and onions. It does not make food radioactive.

Irradiation was patented for food preservation by a French scientist in 1930. In the U.S.

began in the 1940s and has gathered momentum in recent years. Thirty-nine nations have approved irradiation for about 40 food products.

Very little irradiated food is actually available to the general public. A single facility in Mulberry, Florida, called Food Technology Service, Inc. (formerly called Vindicator, Inc.), supplies all the irradiated products carried by retailers and several hospitals that supply irradiated chicken to immuno-suppressed patients. American astronauts have been using irradiated food since 1972.

Proponents say irradiation will make food safer and more > plentiful. It destroys microorganisms that cause foodborne illness, such as Salmonella. E.coli 0157:H7, Campylobacter and Listeria; reduces postharvest losses due to insects and spoilage; and extends the shelf life of foods. It could provide an alternative to some hazardous pesticides, fumigants and preservatives.

Opponents argue that research has not proven the safety of irradiation. They argue that in some foods irradiation reduces nutrients, particularly vitamins, and produces by-products such as benzene, formaldehyde and possibly other compounds that have not been identified. Opponents also say that the transportation and use of radioactive materials pose an unnecessary risk to the public and workers.

In an Associated Press interview Nebraska Governor Ben Nelson

"We've got a major undertaking here to make the public more aware and acceptable of radiation." – Nebraska Governor said that "We've got a major undertaking here to make the public more aware and acceptable of radiation." He said that the beef-safety task force would need to initiate a public awareness campaign to make consumers See Irradiation, page 33 more comfortable with the idea of buying irradiated beef. According to the Associated Press the group should have plenty of time to launch a campaign. Adding the technology necessary in existing plants will be a costly project and how long it will take is unclear. "Irradiation's not something that can be done in a couple of weeks," says Chuck Schroeder, chairman of the National Cattleman's Beef Association.

The fact is, Americans have been eating some irradiationtreated foods for over five years. Poultry, pork, fresh fruits, white potatoes and spices have all been approved for irradiation. Although poultry irradiation was sanctioned over five years ago, the practice has not been embraced. National Broiler Council spokesman, Richard Lobb, says "It's something the industry continues to evaluate. When we see an interest, we'll keep our options open."

Irradiated products in restaurants and hospitals may be served and eaten without the customers' knowledge.

While these foods have been so marked, irradiated products in restaurants and hospitals may be served and eaten without the customers' knowledge. After several outbreaks of e-coli, which caused foodborne illness and death, Americans may reluctantly be willing to try irradiated meat. In a 1996 poll, 92 percent said they would want to know if they were served irradiated food and in another poll from CBS, 77 percent said they wouldn't eat radiationtreated food. However, when the question is posed in a slightly different manner, the outcome is dramatically different. In an FMI study which asked people specifically if they would buy food irradiated to kill bacteria-about 70 percent said yes.

The irradiation of beef is just one step in the process to make beef safer, says Schroeder. "We've said from the start that irradiation or no single tool would be a silver bullet," he said. "But we want as many tools as possible."

FMI President and CEO Tim Hammonds is sensitive to public opinion. "As this technology moves forward, we need to be sure we listen carefully to consumers' ideas and concerns. We need to understand how shoppers perceive the public health benefits of irradiating food products and we need to be sensitive to their needs for proper labeling and packaging. FMI looks forward to working with consumers, food processors, the scientific and medical community, and the goverment on the development of this important new tool for improving food safety."

The American people should benefit from a budget surplus

With the possibility of a federal budget surplus looming in the 1998 fiscal year, Food Distributors International (FDI) has restated its support for the "Taxpayer Dividend Act," introduced in the House by Rep. John Boehner (R-OH) and in the Senate by Sen. Spencer Abraham (R-MI).

The bill would establish a fund for excess revenues which could only be used for deficit reduction or debt repayment, but is off limits for new government spending programs. FDI President John R. Block said "The Taxpayer Dividend Act is a guarantee that any surplus will not be used as an excuse for more government spending."
